- EXPERTS SAY

MacLaine was a fresh-faced beauty when she broke into film in the 1950s

The screen legend was barely recognizable during a public appearance in Spain

SHE was once a fresh-faced beauty who captivated America with both her talent and adventures running with Frank Sinatra's famed Rat Pack. But now Father Time and the plastic surgeon's knife have taken a terrible toll on Shirley MacLaine, say experts.

The Oscar-winner's shocking appearance was caught on camera at an event in Gran Canaria, Spain, where she's filming her latest movie, Wild Oats, with Jessica Lange, Demi Moore and Billy Connolly.

Three experts, who have not treated the 80-year-old screen legend, have examined her photo and tell GLOBE that she has apparently overindulged in cosmetic procedures.

"Her skin is sagging in unnatural places," says New Jersey-based cosmetic surgeon Dr. Steve Fallek. "Some areas are still tight while others are too loose. You can see this particularly in her mid-cheek lines. Her eyebrows are too high and uneven, indicating that she had an extreme brow-lift."

Dr. Kenneth Beer, a board certified dermatologist from West Palm Beach, Fla., notes that the Sweet Charity star is suffering from what appears to be an overly done face-lift.

"It looks like she's had a face-lift that pulled her skin really tight, and all the pull was in the sides of her face, leaving too much slack in the front," he explains. "Over time, her face dropped, and because it's anchored to the sides, she's getting ripples that are fanning out."

"The second thing I see is that she has a very high forehead that's accentuated by significant frontal hair loss. It appears she's wearing a wig to camouflage the hair loss."

And Dr. William Bruno, a cosmetic surgeon from Beverly Hills, adds that Shirley has probably had an eye-lift because her eyes "don't seem as old as the rest of her face."

"I'd say she needs facial rejuvenation at this point, including a full face- and neck-lift with fat grafting to the cheeks to give her more fullness. This would create better overall facial harmony and balance."

MacLaine, Warren Beatty's big sister, was a singing and dancing sensation in her youth and later became a best-selling author. She was nominated for four Best Actress Oscars before finally winning the cherished award for her role as a loving but overbearing mom in the 1983 drama Terms of Endearment.

Sadly, these days MacLaine – who plays a widow mistakenly sent a social security check for $900,000 in Wild Oats – is almost unrecognizable.

Says Dr. Fallek: "She appears to be a prime example of what happens later on in life after having too much work done."
